Hush
-listen who dares...

IT has been a bit difficult lately keeping track of Hush, hasn't it? What with them changing members and travelling around Australia and the world.

No need to worry for a while now, they've settled down nicely — with their great new member Jacques de Jongh wowing everybody at every turn.

Just in case you wanted to know, Jacques is three-quarters Dutch and one-quarter Chinese and he was born in Holland. He played in bands at boarding school there and then around the country. When his family moved to Australia they lived in Whyalla, South Australia first.

Hush is reaching new heights now with records released overseas and top-class sell-out tours around Australia. They are another of those popular groups who will play anywhere they're asked, which is greatly appreciated by their fans.

Last year Hush's album 'Nothing Remains The Same' (how's that for a little philosophy, eh?) was released and, of course, sold like hot cakes. It was originally intended for overseas release to introduce those lucky people to our band but it was so good the powers-that-be released it here as well.

More kudos chalked up for Hush.
